Govt's Pharma R&D Scheme Gets Strong Response

New Delhi: The government's newly introduced scheme to promote research and innovation has evoked a massive response, a top government official said on Thursday.

A month after the Department of Pharmaceutical (DoP) invited applications for research and innovation projects under its Promotion of Research and Innovation in Pharma-MedTech Sector (PRIP) scheme, an initiative to transform the sector into a globally competitive, innovation-driven sector, 700 applications have been received by the department so far.

The scheme aims to cover both pharma and med-tech companies and selected proposals will be provided with the funding support of ₹100 crore, DoP secretary Amit Agrawal told ET on the sidelines of OPPI's annual summit.

"Very recently, we launched an unprecedented and the largest scale scheme...It should serve in creating a pipeline of projects," he said.

Agrawal said there is a huge opportunity for the companies in India. "There is a need to have a faster path to market for products, and we are deeply engaged with that. To enable and create pathways and systems and capacity."

The Organisation of Pharmaceutical Producers of India (OPPI), which represents research-based global pharmaceutical companies in the country, will seek an exclusivity period of ten years after market authorisation for protection of regulatory data of first entities who have filed for novel drugs.

This comes after the Central Drugs Standard Control Organisation (CDSCO) sought comments from pharma industry stakeholders on rules that require the first applicant to conduct clinical trials and bioequivalence studies, while subsequent filers could skip the trials and have an easier path to obtaining approvals for a product launch.

Why are drugmakers demanding stronger data protection?

A note circulated by India's regulatory agency had said there is a lack of level playing field between the first company that obtains a new drug for the first time in the country based on clinical trial and bioequivalence study data and the subsequent applicants that obtain approval of the same new drug based on bioequivalence study data.

First entities' data filed for novel drugs needs protection: OPPI

New Delhi, 21 November

The Organisation of Pharmaceutical Producers of India (OPPI), which represents research-based global pharmaceutical companies in the country, is seeking an exclusivity period of 10 years after market authorisation for protection of regulatory data of first entities who have filed for novel drugs.

This comes after the Central Drug Standards Control Organisation (CDSCO) sought comments from pharma industry stakeholders on rules that require the first applicant to conduct clinical trials and bioequivalence studies, while the subsequent filers could skip the trials and have an easier path to obtaining approvals for a product launch.

A note circulated by India's regulatory agency had highlighted a lack of level playing field between the first company that obtains a new drug for the first time in the country based on clinical trial and bioequivalence study data and the subsequent applicants that obtain approval of the same new drug based on bioequivalence study data.

Saying that India is in a better place in terms of pharma investments than before, OPPI Director General Anil Matai told reporters at the sidelines of the industry body's annual conference that why would a global company launch a new molecule if a second applicant is asked to do a small bioequivalence or a bioavailability study and then it gets referenced to the originator's regulatory documents.

He added that India needs to step up investments for new innovation in pharma, as it cannot remain only a generic supplier to the world.

"That is what we are advocating with the government, that we need to have policies and guidelines, which encourage innovation," he added.

For this, he said that the government would need to set up an enabling environment. This includes regulatory data protection, apart from improvement in the functioning of the State Expert Committee (SEC) of the CDSCO which advises on the safety and efficacy of new drugs and clinical trials in India.

"The third improvement could be in the speed at which our clinical trial applications get processed," he said.

Another executive said that drug makers are also talking of better linkage between the Centre and states.

In India, drugs lose their status as a "new drug" four years after the initial grant of a patent by Centre, and the authority to grant manufacturing permissions shifts from the central licensing authority (CLA) to state licensing authorities.

As India aspires to become a $30 trillion to $35 trillion economy by 2047, the pharmaceutical industry is poised to play a critical role in driving economic growth and enhancing public health, as per a latest report by EY Parthenon and Organisation of Pharmaceutical Producers of India (OPPI).

There are three interlinked pillars defining India's pharmaceutical industry: dominance in generics and vaccines, the advancing CRDMO/CDMO sector, and the expansion of Global Capability Centers.

Titled "Fueling innovation, advancing equity: The power of partnerships and digital-first strategies driving Indian pharma's global dominance", the report highlights the transformative journey of India's pharmaceutical sector as it evolves from its historical role as the "pharmacy of the world" to a global leader in innovation and scientific research.

The establishment and expansion of Global Capability Centers (GCCs) by multinational pharmaceutical firms in India, is becoming critical to enhancing the country's innovation ecosystem. Approximately 50% of leading global life sciences companies have set up GCCs in India, leveraging local talent and advanced digital capabilities.

The report finds that Indian CRDMOs are investing heavily in advanced manufacturing and analytics, positioning themselves as key partners in global research and development. This evolution allows India to transition from a low-cost production hub to an integrated partner in high-value innovation, enabling participation in cutting-edge science and technology.
